Campus Parleys Started to Alter Far East Goals

A nationwide campaign aimed at changing U.S. attitudes toward Red China and this country's role in Viet Nam was launched last night on 30 college campuses across the nation.

A closed-circuit phone hookup brought the voices of the principal speakers, including Norman Cousins, editor of the Saturday Review, and Socialist Norman Thomas, to the campus meetings, including one at Georgetown University here.

Sponsoring the meetings was a recently-formed group based in New Haven, Conn. — Americans for Reappraisal of Far Eastern Policy.
